Writing 101:

A review of writing fundamentals for students who want to raise their SAT/ACT score and make A's in middle school, high school, or college

Good writing informs, persuades, and inspires. It can make us laugh out loud, and it can challenge our hearts and minds.

Good writing also takes training and practice to develop. That's where we come in.

Our Writing 101 class teaches you the essentials of effective writing. You'll learn everything from formulating a thesis to writing clear sentences. Plus, we'll explore the 10 secrets to writing. You'll return to school ready to tackle any writing project with ease.

Why Writing 101?

- In The Nation's Report Card: Writing 2011, the U.S. Department of Education reports that only 24% of U.S. students in 8th and 12th grades have writing skills at the Proficient level.
- As of 2005, the SAT Reasoning Test and the ACT, the two standardized tests used in the college admissions process, were restructured to include a writing section.
- According to a Geiser & Studley study, writing is a core skill required in high school and college classes ranging from language arts to the sciences. A student's ability to write and, in particular, to compose an extended text, is one of the best predictors of success in course work during the first year of college.
- Writing is a valued skill in the workplace. Most professionals spend more than 50% of their time communicating in some fashion, such as through emails, written presentations, speeches, or memorandums.
- Writing communicates your thought processes, professionalism, and credibility. Your ability to communicate effectively and clearly in writing is critical to your success in high school, college, and the workplace.
