Wil Matthews graduated with a BA in English from Texas A&M University and furthered his education at The University of North Texas, earning a Masters of Educational Leadership in 2019. Wil has worked with students with learning differences for 8 years, starting his career at June Shelton School, the largest learning difference school in the world. There, Wil taught Speech, Ethics, and English, and later served as the Dean of Students. Currently, Wil works for Beacon College, the first accredited four-year college in the nation for learning different students, as a Transition Counselor for the Southwest Region. Through Beacon College, Wil works with learning different students to discover their post-secondary path, as well as prepare them for college. He teaches transition courses at two private learning different high schools in Dallas, Texas partnering with Beacon College.
